

Marc A. Johnson
Colorado State University

Dr. Marc Johnson arrived at Colorado State University August 1st, 2003. He serves as the Dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences. The Dean also oversees the Colorado Agricultural Experiment Station.

Dean Johnson has more than 35 years of experience with land-grant universities as student and faculty member, at North Carolina State, Michigan State, Oklahoma State, Kansas State, and Colorado State. Previously, Dr. Johnson served as Head of the Department of Agricultural Economics for seven years and Dean of the College of Agriculture and Director of the Agricultural Experiment Station and Cooperative Extension Service at Kansas State University for eleven years.

Dean Johnson was raised on a family fruit farm near Wichita, Kansas and earned his bachelor's degree in biology from Emporia State University (Kansas), a master's degree in international development from North Carolina State University, and a master's degree in economics and a doctorate in agricultural economics from Michigan State University.

His specializations are marketing, transportation, public policy, and international agriculture. He has been actively engaged nationally and internationally as a researcher and consultant on agricultural systems and agricultural economics.

Also, he has been actively involved in his professional societies and his community, including work with his church, local schools, youth sports, the Boy Scouts of America, and the Fort Collins Larimer Chorale.